Trying Experience for Mrs. D. W. Smith After She Had a Fall

Mrs. D. W. Smith, 53 years of age, fell from the second floor of the Berlin road beyond Allie Wilford's place, fell and hurt herself seriously on the 4th, while doing some housework. She was found on the floor suffering greatly from her injury and from cold as she was unable to attend to her. Medical aid was summoned and she was taken to Barre in the ambulance yesterday. The roads are but little traveled there and the ambulance got into the snow and had to call for help to get out and did not arrive at this village with Mrs. Smith till after dark. The injured woman is the mother of Dan W. Smith, formerly of the lunch cart and lunch room in grange hall, and there are two other sons, none of them being at home at present.

Dynamite, the Giant Farmer.

In the current issue of Farm and Fireside a writer points out some of the various uses of dynamite on the farm as follows:

"On my farm we have found that there are many jobs which come along in the course of a year which the stored-up power in a stick of dynamite will do quicker and cheaper than we could do ourselves. We have used many tons of it, and with few exceptions the results obtained have been excellent. There is little danger in the using of dynamite—in fact, absolutely no danger whatever, provided one first realizes that he is handling an explosive and then uses good, sound common sense.

"When I came on the place I found a plot of about two acres off to the south from the house and barn. The soil was a rich loam, and it was getting all the drainage from my cowyard and stables.

"I believed that it would make a fine truck garden, but there were about 30 stumps on the lot. With the help of one man I started in to clean the lot with the use of dynamite. It took us three days, and the cost of the dynamite we used was in the neighborhood of $30.

"We followed the rule, 'A pound of dynamite to every foot in the diameter of the stump,' and in most cases the stump was removed with a single charge. On three or four stumps we used a double charge. The explosive was in each case placed as near directly under the stump as possible.

"A few years ago I planted 300 apple trees and used power for blowing the holes. Their growth has far surpassed some which were set in spade-dug holes at the same time. I have had to remove fruit from these trees every year to prevent their coming into bearing.

"A similar experience with grapevines has convinced me that trees and shrubs will do much better where the explosive is used either to make the holes for the original planting or, in case they are already planted, to break up the soil about the growing trees.

ONLY POWERFUL MEDICINE WILL END RHEUMATISM

It matters not whether you have had agonizing pains from rheumatism for 20 years or distressing twinges for 20 weeks. Rheumatism is strong enough and mighty and powerful enough to drive rheumatic poisons from your body and abolish all misery, or money back. The Red Cross Pharmacy and all druggists sell Rheuma on a no-cure-no-pay basis for not more than 25 cents a bottle, and after you take a teaspoonful once a day for two days you should know that at last you have obtained a remedy that will conquer rheumatism.

For over five years throughout America Rheuma has been prescribed by broad-minded physicians and has released thousands from agony, pain and despair.—Adv.

How to Heal Skin-Diseases

A Baltimore doctor suggests this simple but reliable and inexpensive, home treatment for people suffering with eczema, ringworm, rashes and similar itching, burning skin troubles.

At any reliable druggist's get a jar of resinol ointment and a cake of resinol soap. These are not at all expensive. With the resinol soap and warm water bathe the affected parts thoroughly, until they are free from crusts and the skin is softened. Dry very gently, spread on the thin layer of the resinol ointment, and cover with a light bandage—if necessary to protect the clothing. This should be done twice a day. Usually the itching and burning stop with the first treatment, and the skin soon becomes clear and healthy again.

Almost any soap will clean the skin and hair. But those who want a soap which not only cleanses but actually helps the complexion and hair are wise to choose resinol soap.

NO LONGER BEAU BRUMMEL.

Austro-Hungarian Officer Has Suddenly Become Serious.

With the Austro-Hungarian army on Isonzo front, Feb. 8.—Once known as a man who paid much attention to dress and the lighter side of his profession, the Austro-Hungarian officer has during the war become a very serious individual.

The military Beau Brummel of Europe has been changed into a hard soldier—a man who wears the cloth of the private and takes his place in the firing line with rifle and bayonet, who, when the work is done sees to it that those under him get their food before he eats his.

To those who know the Austro-Hungarian officer as he appeared in time of peace, and still appears when away from the front, there is something grim in this. With his workday clothing goes a working mind. At the front he is on duty constantly, and even the lucky ones who may for a time do staff work at some headquarters consider themselves well off when the working day is less than fourteen hours.

In one of the Tolmein positions The Associated Press correspondent met a lieutenant-colonel, acting as battalion commander, who had been on duty almost twenty-four hours every day for ten months without a single leave of absence. What sleep he had had been broken every night by the ringing of the telephone beside his bed, and by many an alarm. He has just been given leave of absence for a month for recuperation.

There is a captain of Scotch descent, leader of a company of Bosnians in the same sector, who has been on duty interrupted for more than a year. Drilling trenches into the hard line of his position has become his passion. What the various artillery calibres of the Italians will do on the ground he holds, forms wonderful tables in his Scotch brain, and of special interest is that he has the habit of taking a short club into battle. His men tell remarkable stories how he uses this. Sole pastime of this captain is casting for trout in a brook under the very noses of the Italians. He was wounded twice before he came to his present position.

At the various headquarters officers are met who should be home. Wounds have made service in the trenches impossible for them, but they do whatever they can. With both hands totally crippled a major works at a certain general headquarters. It is painful to see him turn over the leaves of the reports he studies. Others walk with the aid of a stick. Some lack an arm or leg.

Such men, it is claimed, make the best officers for headquarters work. As a rule they are recommended for their duties by special qualities, be they unusual intelligence or training in some department. An officer made unfit for field work by wounds after two years of service in the firing line is a good asset to any staff if he has the needed intelligence to make use of the experience he has had. To many it seems great consolation that they are still able to be of service to the institution to which they have given their life.

MAY CONTAIN GAS.

Blackfoot Indian Reservation in Montana May Also Have Oil.

The widespread interest in the development of the oil and gas resources of the country gives a forthcoming report on a Montana area special value to oil prospectors in the state.

A report on the Blackfoot Indian reservation just issued by the geological survey of the department of the interior as a result of field work undertaken for the office of the southward extension of the Calgary field of Alberta, Canada. The reservation is underlain by the same formations that have yielded small quantities of oil and gas in the Calgary field. The report points out the general similarity of the two regions and discusses the geologic facts upon which an intelligent search for oil and gas in the reservation must be based. To this end it describes in detail about thirteen anticlines and structural terraces, points out favorable or unfavorable features in each, and indicates the most advantageous places for drilling and the depths at which the possibly productive sands may be reached.

The sandstones in the lower part of the Colorado shale and the underlying Kootenai formation are believed to be the only source of oil and gas in this region. Although there are no known surface indications of oil and gas within the reservation, recent discoveries have demonstrated the presence of petroleum and petroleum residues in the lower part of the Colorado shale in an area adjoining the reservation on the south. There it was found that a body of shale about 50 feet thick, in the lower part of the Colorado, is petroliferous over a considerable area. Small samples of this shale yielded on distillation about two gallons of oil to the ton, and thin beds of limestone interbedded in the shale are impregnated with a soft tarry bitumen. These facts, together with the known occurrence of oil and gas in the Colorado shale in Alberta and of seeps from the same shale in northern Montana, lead to the belief that oil and gas may occur in some of the areas of most favorable structure in the Blackfoot Indian reservation. Eugene Stehinger, the author of the report, believes that the chances for success in the reservation are sufficient to warrant careful and systematic drilling.

AMUSEMENT NOTES

Thirty-five Women, "Most Beautiful" in "Bringing Up Father in Politics."

A new phase in the eventful career of Jiggs Mahoney, the famous hero in the popular cartoon creations of George McManus, is shown in the new Gus Hill comedy, "Bringing Up Father in Politics," which comes to the opera house next Monday night. Jiggs is elected congressman and goes to Washington, where it is hoped he becomes a usual representative of the people. He can thank his wife for the honor which he strongly opposes at first. Mrs. Mahoney, dwelling in the wealth earned by Jiggs when he was in the contracting business, seems to let some of it burn through her fingers. At any rate she yearns for something to dissipate a large amount of money which she seems to be obsessed, so she takes up the cudgels in favor of women suffrage with the result that the head of the family must be honored with some sort of a nomination. Jiggs is eventually elected and then comes the grand speech of acceptance.

When Jiggs expects him to discourse words of praise for the untiring efforts of his wife in his behalf, he does the unexpected and throws cold water upon the cause for suffrage and roasts the gentler sex to a frazzle. Of course this is the signal for a hollaabalo and as a rule these things arouse laughter. We use the word laughter mildly, in reality it causes a riot of mirth and as it is better to suffer than weep, Jiggs should be condemned rather than condemned. The offering literally bristles with hilarious and catchy music, side-splitting incidents. It is in three acts with the action so spirited that even to wink might cause the auditor to miss something. Thirty-five people, mostly beautiful young women are employed.—adv.

A physician was driving through a village when he saw a man amusing a crowd with the antics of his trick dog. The doctor pulled up and said: "My dear man, how do you manage to train your dog that way? I can't teach mine a single trick."

OPPOSITION TO 5-MILE LIQUOR RADIUS BILL

measure introduced by Mr. Hunt of Danville and designed to eliminate the open saloon from within a five-mile radius of any institution of higher learning within the state.

Judge Darling not only opposed the bill in an impressive and interesting speech of over half an hour but submitted to a cross examination by Clifford H. Smith of the Vermont Anti-Saloon league and by Representative Allen of Vernon and by use of clever repartee caused repeated laughter at the expense of his questioners.

Opponents of the bill were not, however, permitted to hold undisputed sway, for toward the close of the hearing, which was held in representatives' hall directly after adjournment and attended by several hundred people, Mr. Smith, secretary of the Anti-Saloon league, Prof. Groat of the University of Vermont and Dr. F. E. Clark of the University of Vermont medical college, spoke in favor of the measure. Representatives Cannon of Northfield and LaFleur of Middlebury, both of which towns would be affected by the passage of the Hunt bill, briefly voiced their opposition to the bill.

Representative Stearns of Burlington opened the hearing with a brief reference to the statement of President Guy Potter Benton made last week, when the head of the state university said that similar legislation had been passed in many states. Mr. Stearns mentioned many of the larger universities of the country such as Harvard, Brown, Yale, University of Rochester, Columbia, etc., to show that none of the states in which they are located have any such law. With the Harvard students a vote is taken each year to ascertain if the body wishes to place Cambridge in the license or no-license column.

Mr. Shaw, a senator in the legislature of 1915, pointed out that the idea came out of the West, where most modern legislation emanates, but that a New England state has yet to adopt such a law. In Ohio, where Dr. Benton was located before coming to Vermont five years ago, there is one instance where there is a two-mile limit for an institution of higher learning, and 1,200 yards is fixed as a limit in the case of certain other institutions. In Iowa, where Dr. Benton was at one time located, saloons are held at a distance but breweries are allowed to flourish anywhere.

Judge Darling followed Mr. Shaw and discussed the question from practically every angle, concluding by answering questions asked by Mr. Smith and Representative Allen. Judge Darling was applauded vigorously.

Judge Darling said in opening that there are two propositions to consider, first, the University of Vermont; second, the people of Burlington.

He said that the university is supposed to have the task of making leaders in the different branches of life and in professions. Are we, questioned the speaker, to place these prospective leaders in a glass case during their college career, having them issue from the institution without moral stamina?

The students, he argued, do not buy their liquor in the open saloon but purchase it secretly and privately and take it to their rooms and club houses, that is, the students who drink. He did not agree with Dr. Benton that there are as many as five or ten each year who succumb to the lure of the open saloon.

Judge Darling said that he was a firm believer in the ability of the people of the state to conduct their own affairs without going out west or down south, or to Ohio or Iowa.

He not only questioned the matter of the University of Vermont wanting any such legislation as the Hunt measure but stated positively that certain members of the board of trustees resented it. Certainly if the board of trustees wanted any legislation for the benefit of the university they know the way about the State House without a guide and would not go to a small village on the other side of the state to have it presented. Certain people, said Judge Darling, never liked the local option law and have done all they could to circumvent that law.

Between the two extremes on the question of prohibition, on one side the temperance fanatic and on the other the drunkard and liquor interests, stand the great majority of people who usually see the question fairly and in the right light for the good of the people.

Judge Darling said that just because it might be a good thing for St. Johnsbury to have a saloon, never having voted license, it is ridiculous to imagine a bill being introduced making compulsory that town having a saloon but the Hunt bill planned to make Burlington dry against the expressed will of the people.

The law starts a despised law in the community, more arbitrary than the taxation laws of the Revolution time, and should it pass would lack support.

Secretary Smith of the Anti-Saloon league asked Judge Darling if he had said that all of the people of Burlington resented the Hunt measure and after the latter had attempted to show that they evidently did, as evidenced by the vote on the local option for the past 10 years and last year's vote on the Perry bill, repeated the question. Judge Darling, facing his interrogator and within a few feet of him, said: "You are my fellow townsman." The several hundred interested listeners appreciated the point and broke into unexpressed laughter at the reply. Representative Allen of Vernon also endeavored to corner Judge Darling, but finally decided that he could not match the Burlington man and sat down rather discomfited.

Col. J. H. Minnis objected to disfranchisement by indirectness and said that the measure in his opinion originated with the Anti-Saloon league. This statement brought forth an instant denial from Mr. Smith, who asked the committee to believe him when he said that the league had no knowledge that such a bill was introduced until it made its appearance.

Col. Minnis was followed by Representatives Cannon of Northfield and LaFleur of Middlebury, and W. B. McKillip of Burlington.

Then the advocates of the bill, Mr. Smith, Prof. Groat and several others, spoke, most of their arguments being along the lines presented by Pres. Benton and other members of the faculty a week ago. Yesterday's hearing was the final one to be held by the committee.

Dr. X. was a man who took his profession seriously, and he had an immense practice. What annoyed him was to be

"Is it dangerous, then?" she asked. "Certainly not," said the doctor, "but tomorrow it would have disappeared, and I should have lost my fee for this visit."
